Hamza Meddeb is a Jean Monnet postdoctoral Fellow at the European University Institute in Florence. His Thesis (defended at Sciences Po Paris in October 2012) focused on domination in everyday life under Ben Ali regime in Tunisia and the way state-society relationships have been systematically framed and governed through unexpressed norms and ways of acting and behaving. He is currently studying the political transition in Tunisia with a specific focus on the topics of social injustice and the emergence of transactional politics between Islamists and secularists. Among his publications, “L’ambivalence de la course à el khobza. Obéir et se révolter en Tunisie” (Politique Africaine, 121/2011).
